About Us

After the birth of his son Nai, Cennydd John started to consider all those things that parents spend their nights and days worrying about: what would Nai's future be like? How could he help? How was he going to juggle work and fatherhood? All the usual questions...Having lived, studied and worked overseas, he was looking for an education that would reflect the international perspective that was fundamental to him: global in outlook and ethos, and focussed on offering children real opportunities to develop the skills and capabilities that they would need to meet the challenges of the future head on. Cenn incorporated Hatching Dragons in 2014 to offer a different model of childcare for globally travelled, aspirational parents who wanted more from their care provider. We aim to: - Develop technical fluency in languages that mattered to their child's future - Demonstrate the cognitive impact and benefit of dual language learning to enhance their academic potential - Nurture a greater level of intercultural understanding that would see them develop the adaptability that an increasingly interconnected and globalised economy would require of them. But most of all, Hatching Dragons aims to offer parents and their children the highest quality, in terms of childcare. The above goals are lofty and ambitious but are nothing in comparison to an environment that offers children the constant love, care and attention they deserve. And with us, they will. It's time to start Hatching Dragons...

Our Approach to Education

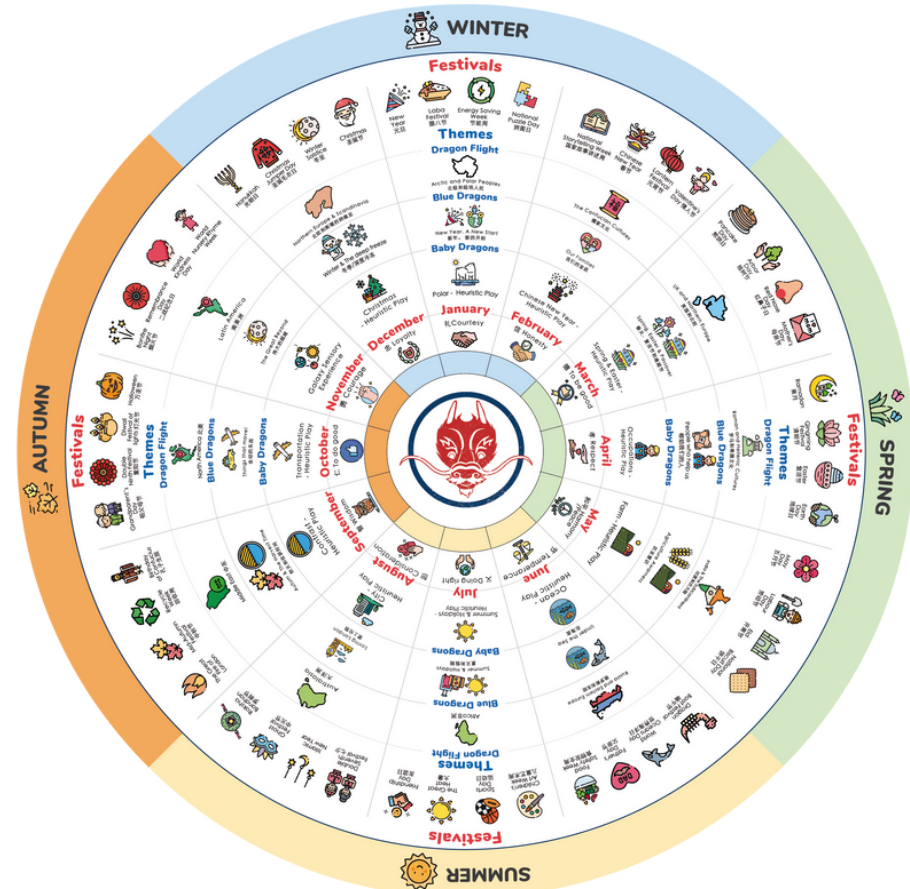

We believe in the importance of values-based, thematic and experiential learning for our children. Our annual plan is a cyclic approach to learning based on

1. Values: to provide an emotional focus for character-based learning; a moral thread that runs through all practice delivered in that month.
2. Experiences: to recognise and celebrate diversity, our children learn through rich experiences based on a cultural programme that also provides the basis for our...
3. Themes: to contextualise children's learning, whilst also providing structure to the bilingual framework. Children listen, understand and speak thematically aligned words, stories and songs throughout the course of the month.

The world is changing fast and in new directions that previously could not have even been contemplated. We believe in nurturing different academic, cultural and emotional skills to set the foundation for our children to thrive in the future.
